Raue performance

To the Editor:

Well, the Raue Center has done it again. And so has the Northwest Herald, which sponsored the show I am about to gush over.

Yes, I am a proud Raue board member. I was delighted to be present for the April 9 Three Red Neck Tenors performance at the Raue. Their show was the most fun and most auditorially pleasing event I've attended in a long while.

Full of comedy, it featured classically trained musical veterans of the stage and world opera who could do everything from yodel to bring the audience to three standing ovations. They sang more than 20 songs from Broadway shows and availed themselves to the appreciative audience in the lobby after the show.

They wore their mullets and costumes well (who will ever be able to forget them in their costumes during the "Gotta Have a Gimmick" segment?). The tenors even recognized in these financially difficult times how appreciative they were that the audience put down money to come see them! So thanks, Raue, and the Northwest Herald for bringing this show back.
